UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT SEATTLE

NEXON KOREA CORPORATION, a Korean Corporation,

Plaintiff,

v.

IRONMACE CO LTD, a Korean
Corporation, et al.

Defendants.

CASE NO. 2:23-cv-00576-TL

ORDER OF DISMISSAL ON GROUNDS OF FORUM NON CONVENIENS

This case arises from a copyright dispute between a Korean video game development company and two of its former employees who left to start their own company. Dkt. No. 1 ¶ 1. The matter is before the Court on Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss on Grounds of Forum Non Conveniens (Dkt. No. 29) and Motion for Relief from the Initial Disclosure Deadline and for a Protective Order to Stay Discovery (Dkt. No. 44). Both parties requested oral argument (Dkt. Nos. 29, 38, 45), but the Court deems oral argument unnecessary to the disposition of this

1 motion. See LCR 7(b)(4). Having considered the relevant record,¹ the Court GRANTS the motion 2 to dismiss and DENIES as MOOT the motion for miscellaneous relief.

3 I. BACKGROUND

4 Nexon Korea Corporation (“Nexon”) and Ironmace Co., Ltd. (“Ironmace”) are two 5 Korean videogame companies currently engaged in a copyright dispute in Korea. Nexon is a 6 large videogame developer that previously employed Defendants Terence Seungha Park (“Park”) and 7 Ju-Hyun Choi (“Choi”) to develop a videogame referred to as “P3.” Dkt. No. 38 at 11. Choi 8 and Park worked on P3 out of Nexon’s Korean offices. Dkt. No. 29 at 7. While employed, both 9 Park and Choi individually signed agreements that selected Seoul District Court as the forum to 10 hear work-related intellectual property disputes. Dkt. No. 31 at 208 (Exhibit 5) and 211 11 (Exhibit 6). They left the company before the P3 project was finished, and they allege that it was 12 “nowhere near being released” at the time of their departure. Dkt. No. 29 at 7. Nexon asserts that, 13 before departing, Choi stole source code from Nexon’s Korean servers and sent them to his 14 private server. Dkt. No. 38 at 11. Defendants then formed Ironmace (collectively with Park and 15 Choi, Defendants). Id. Ironmace soon released “Dark and Darker,” which is a videogame in the 16 same genre as P3 but with different features. Dkt. No. 29 at 8. Nexon alleges that Ironmace used 17 the stolen source code to complete Dark and Darker, essentially rebranding P3 as the new 18 company’s intellectual property, a point that Ironmace denies. Id.

21 ¹ Nexon filed a notice of intent to file a surreply pursuant to Local Civil Rule (“LCR”) 7(g), purportedly to move to 22 strike declarations and related arguments included with Defendants’ reply briefing on the motion to dismiss. Dkt.
23 No. 50. Nexon then filed a surreply brief that fails to raise any legally sufficient grounds for striking any portions of 24 the reply brief or related materials. See Dkt. No. 53. Nexon’s arguments in support of its motion to strike are that Defendants raised certain arguments only in reply that they could have initially raised in their motion brief (id.), but this is because Defendants attempt to counter specific arguments Nexon makes in opposition to the motion to dismiss, as they are expected to do on reply. Id. Nexon does not claim that Defendants raise any arguments for the first time on reply that do not directly respond to Nexon’s arguments in opposition. The Court will therefore not consider the inappropriately superfluous briefing in deciding this motion to dismiss.

1 Ironmace admits it implemented “playtests” of Dark and Darker to allow gamers in major 2 gaming markets access to the game in advance of its official release, including in the United 3 States. Dkt. No. 45 at 15. Ironmace has also specifically promoted the game in the U.S. market.
4 Dkt. Nos. 39-3, 39-5, 39-10. Because of this, Nexon issued a “take down notice” to have Dark
5 and Darker removed from the popular gaming platform Steam. Dkt. No. 29 at 20. Ironmace 6 subsequently sent a counter-notification to Valve, the Washington corporation that owns Steam, 7 under the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (“DMCA”), 17 U.S.C. § 512. Dkt. Nos. 39-7, 39-8.
8 These disputes led to parallel litigation occurring in Korea, as the Parties have sued each other in 9 Suwon District Court. Dkt. No. 29 at 5. Nexon subsequently filed their complaint in this Court 10 (Dkt. No. 1), and Defendants now move to dismiss on forum non conveniens grounds, arguing 11 that the Korean litigation is an adequate and more convenient forum to resolve Nexon’s claims 12 (Dkt. No. 29). Defendants also move the Court for relief from the initial case management order 13 deadlines and discovery obligations pending resolution of the motion to dismiss. Dkt. No. 44.

14 II. LEGAL STANDARD

15 A district court may dismiss a case where litigation in a foreign forum would be more 16 convenient for the litigants. Piper Aircraft Co. v. Reyno, 454 U.S. 235, 250 (1981). However, the 17 doctrine of forum non conveniens should only be employed sparingly. Boston Telecomms. Grp.
18 v. Wood, 588 F.3d 1201, 1212 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing Dole Food Co. v. Watts, 303 F.3d 1104, 19 1118 (9th Cir. 2002)). In determining whether to dismiss a case on these grounds, courts will 20 consider: (1) whether an adequate alternative forum exists; and (2) whether the balance of private 21 and public interest factors weigh in favor of dismissal. Lueck v. Sundstrand Corp., 236 F.3d 22 1137, 1142 (9th Cir. 2001). An adequate alternative forum is one where the defendant is 23 amenable to service of process. Id. at 1143. The defendant must also show that the foreign forum 24 will provide the plaintiff with some remedy for their claims if merited. Id. The standard for

1 adequacy is a low one. Tuazon v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 433 F.3d 1163, 1178 (9th Cir.
2 2006).

3 To weigh the interests of the parties, the following private-interest factors must be 4 considered:

- 5 (1) the residence of the parties and the witnesses;
- 6 (2) the forum’s convenience to the litigants;
- 7 (3) access to the physical evidence and other sources of proof;
- 8 (4) whether unwilling witnesses can be compelled to testify;
- 9 (5) the cost of bringing witnesses to trial;
- 10 (6) the enforceability of the judgment; and
- 11 (7) “all other practical problems that make trial of a case easy, expeditious, and 12 inexpensive.”

13 Lueck, 236 F.3d at 1145 (quoting Gulf Oil Corp. v. Gilbert, 330 U.S. 501, 508 (1947)). The court 14 must also weigh the following public interest factors:

- 15 (1) local interest of lawsuit;
- 16 (2) the court’s familiarity with governing law;
- 17 (3) burden on local courts and juries;
- 18 (4) congestion in the court; and
- 19 (5) the costs of resolving a dispute unrelated to this forum.

20 Id. at 1147; Gulf Oil Corp., 330 U.S. at 509.

21 These factors are weighed against each other in a balancing test to determine if they favor 22 dismissal. Lueck, 236 F.3d at 1145. “[A] foreign plaintiff’s choice of forum merits less deference 23 than that of a plaintiff who resides in the selected forum, and the showing required for dismissal 24

1 is reduced.” Id. (citing Gemini Cap. Grp., Inc. v. Yap Fishing Corp., 150 F.3d 1088, 1091 (9th
2 Cir. 1998)).

3 When parties have agreed to a forum selection clause, the district court should normally 4 honor that agreement except in extraordinary circumstances unrelated to the parties’ 5 convenience. Atl. Marine Constr. Co. v. United States Dist. Ct. for the W. Dist. of Tex., 571 U.S.
6 49, 62 (2013). When a forum selection clause is involved (and the selected forum is not a federal 7 forum to which the case can be transferred per 28 U.S.C. § 1404), the traditional dismissal for 8 forum non conveniens analysis is changed in the following way: (1) the plaintiff’s choice of 9 forum merits no weight; and (2) the private interests of the parties no longer need to be 10 considered but the public interest factor should still be weighed. See id. at 61–65.

11 III. DISCUSSION

12 The Parties dispute whether: (1) dismissal for forum non conveniens is appropriate; 13 (2) the forum selection clause included in the prior employment agreements apply to this case; 14 and (3) it is appropriate for the Court to vacate its initial case management scheduling order and 15 stay discovery until the motion to dismiss is resolved. Resolution of the forum selection cause 16 dispute governs the appropriate analytical framework for the motion to dismiss. Therefore, the 17 Court will first resolve the forum selection clause dispute before determining whether dismissal 18 is appropriate and then turning to the motion for relief from the case schedule.

19 A. Forum Selection Clause Analysis

20 Nexon and Defendants Choi and Park executed an agreement designating exclusive 21 jurisdiction to the Seoul Central District Court for disputes involving work-related intellectual 22 property. Dkt. No. 31 at 208, 211. Nexon seeks to prevent the application of this agreement by 23 raising several arguments. For the reasons discussed below, the Court rejects Nexon’s 24 arguments.

1 1. The DMCA does not preclude forum non conveniens.

2 Nexon argues that the DMCA bars dismissal of a case on the grounds of forum non 3 conveniens. Dkt. No. 38 at 14. Under the DMCA, when a service provider removes allegedly 4 copyright-infringing material from their service platform, the alleged infringer has the right to 5 issue a counter-notification to reinstate their product to the platform, provided that the alleged 6 infringer consents to the jurisdiction of the federal court in the judicial district where the service 7 provider is located. 17 U.S.C. § 512(g)(3)(D). The DMCA counter-notification process requires 8 the subscriber to provide:

9 a statement that the subscriber consents to the jurisdiction of Federal 10 District Court for the judicial district in which the address is located, 11 or if the subscriber’s address is outside of the United States, for any 12 judicial district in which the service provider may be found, and that the subscriber will accept service of process from the person who provided notification under subsection (c)(1)(C) or an agent of such person.

14 In response to Nexon’s take-down action removing Dark and Darker from the Steam 15 platform, Ironmace submitted a DMCA counter-notification to Valve and consequently 16 consented to the jurisdiction of the Western District of Washington, where Valve’s headquarters 17 are located. Dkt. No. 39-8 at 7. Valve is not a party to this action. Nonetheless, Nexon argues 18 that Defendants, having generally consented to jurisdiction in this District, are precluded from 19 claiming that it is an inconvenient forum. Dkt. No. 38 at 14–18. The Court disagrees.

20 Jurisdiction and venue are two, distinct concepts. SEC v. Ross, 504 F.3d 1130, 1140 (9th 21 Cir. 2007) (“[T]he question of whether the court can exercise personal jurisdiction over a party is 22 distinct from the question of whether venue will properly lie in the court exercising 23 jurisdiction.”); Action Embroidery Corp. v. Atl. Embroidery, Inc., 368 F.3d 1174, 1178–79 (9th 24 Cir. 2004) (“It has long been recognized that the question of a federal court’s competence to 1 exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant is distinct from the question of whether venue is 2 proper.”). There is no indication from the DMCA that Congress intended to conflate the two.

3 Venue refers to where a civil action may be brought. See 28 U.S.C. § 1391. But the DMCA only 4 speaks to jurisdiction over the subscriber, or here, Defendants.

5 Nexon relies on a Ninth Circuit ruling but fails to draw any compelling similarities to its 6 cited case. In Zipfel v. Halliburton Co., the Ninth Circuit held that the forum non conveniens 7 doctrine was unavailable for claims under the Jones Act. 832 F.2d 1477, 1487 (9th Cir. 1987).
8 But it reached that conclusion because the Jones Act contained specific venue and subject matter 9 jurisdiction clauses. Id. The DMCA contains only a specific personal jurisdiction provision.
10 Compare 46 U.S.C. § 688(a) (“Jurisdiction in [] actions [under the Jones Act] shall be under the 11 court of the district in which the defendant employer resides or in which his principal office is 12 located.” (emphasis added)), with 17 U.S.C. § 512(g)(3)(D) (“[T]he subscriber consents to the 13 jurisdiction of Federal District Court for the judicial district in which the address is located.” 14 (emphasis added)). Nexon attempts to convince the Court that a party that consents to personal 15 jurisdiction also agrees that venue is proper and convenient but cites no legal authority for such a 16 conclusion. See Dkt. No. 38 at 14–18. Instead, there is ample authority leading to the opposite 17 conclusion. Several courts in this Circuit have found that, under the DMCA, a counter-18 notification serves as consent to personal jurisdiction only. E.g., Epic Games, Inc. v. Mendes, 19 No. C17-6223, 2018 WL 2926086, at *5 (N.D. Cal. June 12, 2018) (finding that defendant 20 consented to personal jurisdiction in the Northern District of California because he submitted an 21 express statement along with the counter-notification); Melendez v. Vaiana, No.
22 EDCV162516JGBSPX, 2017 WL 8183139, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 19, 2017) (same); Tecnologias
23 Avanzadas RD, SRL v. Riegler, No. C16-6701, 2017 WL 2772301, at *2 (N.D. Cal. June 1, 24 2017) (same); accord Real v. Matteo, No. C17-1288, 2018 WL 493596, at *5 (W.D. La. Jan. 3,

1 2018), report and recommendation adopted, 2018 WL 494271 (W.D. La. Jan. 19, 2018); Wright
2 v. Edwards, No. C21-6063, 2022 WL 17820247, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. July 18, 2022). The DMCA 3 therefore does not preclude application of the doctrine of forum non conveniens and dismissal is 4 appropriate if the Court finds that an adequate foreign forum exists and the balance of interests 5 weighs in favor of the more convenient forum.

6 2. This Court was not the bargained for forum.

7 Nexon argues that Defendants bargained for this forum by availing themselves of the 8 benefits of submitting a DMCA counter-notification. Dkt. No. 38 at 18. Nexon submits that 9 Ironmace’s affirmative act of sending a counter-notification makes this District “presumptively 10 valid,” because Defendants have created a “permissive forum selection clause” selecting this 11 District as the forum for dispute through the DMCA. Dkt. No. 38 at 18–19. But Nexon’s 12 argument misses the point. The forum non conveniens analysis does not turn on whether the 13 challenged forum is “valid,” but on whether the alternate forum is adequate and more appropriate 14 under the circumstances. See Atl. Marine Constr. Co., 571 U.S. at 59 (concluding that “[transfer 15 under 28 U.S.C. §] 1404(a) is merely a codification of the doctrine of forum non conveniens for 16 [a] subset of cases” and highlighting that “§ 1404(a) does not condition transfer on the initial 17 forum’s being ‘wrong’”).

18 Nexon’s quasi-contractual argument is again based on a misconstruction of the law.
19 Nexon relies on Atlantic Marine, where the U.S. Supreme Court noted that forum-selection 20 clauses that had been bargained for by parties needed to be honored. Id. at 63. But in Atlantic 21 Marine, the petitioner was seeking a writ of mandamus directing the district court to enforce a 22 forum selection clause that was included in an enforceable subcontract between the parties 23 litigating before the district court. Id. at 53. Therefore, transfer of the case was sought based on 24 the forum selection clause bargained for and contained in the parties’ subcontract. Id. Here,

1 Ironmace’s consent to federal jurisdiction under the DMCA’s counter-notification procedures 2 simply allows a federal court to assert personal jurisdiction over Ironmace in a DMCA related 3 action—it does not provide the basis for a contract. See Tecnologias Avanzadas RD, SRL, 2017 4 WL 2772301, at *2 (the DMCA “counter-notification is not a contract”); Crunchyroll, Inc. v.
5 Pledge, No. C11-2334, 2014 WL 1347492, at *9 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 31, 2014) (holding that the 6 defendant’s submission of a counter-notification under the DMCA was not a contract). Nexon’s 7 strained claim that “Ironmace made a bargain in which it availed itself of the benefits of 8 submitting a DMCA counter-notification, in exchange for which it [consented to this Court’s 9 jurisdiction]” (Dkt. No. 38 at 18), therefore fails to support the inference that a quasi-contractual 10 forum selection clause was formed that prohibits Defendants’ motion.

11 Even if the Court accepted Nexon’s quasi-contractual forum selection clause theory, 12 Section 512 of the DMCA is intended to limit the potential liability an online service provider
13 might face from either a subscriber (like Ironmace) or an alleged copyright holder (like Nexon) 14 for various online services. See 17 U.S.C. § 512. The only entity with which a subscriber 15 submitting a DMCA counter-notification would be “bargaining” is the service provider.
16 See id. § 512(g)(3). No contractual relationship, quasi- or otherwise, between Nexon and 17 Defendants could possibly arise out of Ironmace’s counter-notification submission to Valve.
18 Cf. Crunchyroll, Inc., 2014 WL 1347492, at *9. Therefore, Nexon’s quasi-contractual argument 19 still fails.

20 3. Nexon’s remaining grounds are unsupported.

21 Finally, Nexon submits a number of arguments to dissuade the Court from adopting the 22 forum selection clause. However, they are generally unfounded. Nexon argues that the forum 23 selection clause does not apply because it does not cover disputes occurring after Choi and 24 Park’s employment. Dkt. No. 38 at 20. However, the document expressly governs events that 1 occur “[a]fter this Agreement is concluded.” Dkt. No. 31 at 208, 211. Similarly, Nexon claims 2 that Ironmace, as a separately named Defendant, is not entitled to enforce the agreements as it 3 was not party to the documents containing the forum selection clause. Dkt. No. 38 at 21. But 4 because the causes of action alleged are closely related to the contract, the Parties are all subject

5 to the forum selection clause. Cf. Manetti-Farrow, Inc. v. Gucci Am., Inc., 858 F.2d 509, 514
6 (9th Cir. 1988) (finding that the allegedly tortious conduct of the defendants was so intimately 7 related to the contractual relationship that the clause applied to plaintiff’s tort claims as well).
8 Here, Choi and Park are signatories to the forum selection clause and are alleged to have stolen 9 source code to build the allegedly infringing game. Dkt. No. 38 at 11. That game was distributed 10 by Ironmace, the new company that Choi and Park formed. Id. at 11–12. Ironmace’s alleged 11 wrongful activity is thus intimately related to the contract because it is the vehicle through which 12 the signatories allegedly violated the contract.

13 Finally, Nexon argues that Defendants’ action in Suwon District Court suggests that 14 Seoul Central District Court is not a proper forum. Id. at 22. Here, Nexon implicitly argues that it 15 would be unfair to allow Defendants to designate the Seoul forum as adequate to get the case 16 dismissed in this District, while simultaneously suing instead in the Suwon court. Id. However, 17 as Defendants point out in their reply, this would lead this Court toward analyzing which Korean 18 forum, either Suwon or Seoul, is the more appropriate setting. Dkt. No. 45 at 10–11. But this 19 exceeds the Court’s required analysis. Ninth Circuit precedent clearly outlines that the 20 availability of a remedy for the plaintiff is the important factor. Yei A Sun v. Advanced China
21 Healthcare, Inc., 901 F.3d 1081, 1092 (9th Cir. 2018). Even though the Parties agreed on Seoul 22 District Court as their forum of choice in the employment agreements (Dkt. No. 31 at 208, 211), 23 they are actively pursuing their respective suits in Suwon District Court. Dkt. No. 29 at 5. This 24

1 suggests that either of these Korean forums offer a remedy that would satisfy the Parties. See 2 also infra, § III.B.1.

3 Given that none of Nexon’s arguments succeed, it follows that the forum selection clause 4 should be considered in analyzing this motion.

5 B. Forum Non Conveniens Analysis

6 The party seeking forum on conveniens dismissal must show the existence of an adequate 7 alternative forum. Lueck, 236 F.3d at 1143. This is not a strenuous standard to meet. Tuazon, 433 8 F.3d at 1178.

9 Once this standard is met, the party seeking to resist dismissal must convince the Court 10 that the relevant interest factors weigh against dismissal. See Atl. Marine Constr. Co., 571 U.S.
11 at 63. However, when a valid forum selection clause is involved, the Court considers only the 12 public-interest factors, since the consideration of the contract term results in the private factors 13 weighing in favor of the selected forum by default. Id. at 64. Except “in all but the most unusual 14 cases,” the public-interest factors “rarely” overcome enforcement of the contractually agreed-15 upon forum selection clause. Id. at 64–66.

16 1. Korea is an adequate alternative forum.

17 As an initial matter, the Court notes that the Parties are already litigating this controversy 18 in Korea. Dkt. No. 31 at 4. Therefore, Defendants obviously are amenable to (and have already 19 accepted) service of process in a Korean forum. To show that Korean courts are able to provide 20 an adequate remedy, Defendants cite numerous protections that Korean law provides for 21 plaintiffs bringing copyright claims. Dkt. No. 29 at 12, 13. In addition, legal authority from 22 district courts in this Circuit and in other circuits support the proposition that Korea is an 23 adequate forum, generally, and for cases involving trade secrets and copyrights specifically. See, 24 e.g., Primacy Eng’g, Inc. v. SAN Eng’g, No. C18-129, 2019 WL 3412914, at *3 (W.D. Tex. July

1 29, 2019) (holding Korea is an adequate alternative forum in case involving alleged 2 misappropriation of trade secrets); Hyewoong Yoon v. Seyeon Lee, 433 F. Supp. 3d 18, 26 (D.
3 Mass. 2019) (“The South Korean Action is proof that there is an alternative forum for 4 [plaintiff’s] claims.”); ECC Int’l, LLC v. KEB Hana Bank, No. C16-06487, 2016 WL 10968141, 5 at *3 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 9, 2016) (“Because Defendant is amenable to service in Korea, and because 6 Korea provides a remedy for Plaintiff’s claims, the Court finds Korea to be an adequate 7 alternative forum.”); Wamai v. Indus. Bank of Korea, No. C21-325, 2021 WL 3038402, at *8 8 (S.D.N.Y. July 14, 2021) (holding Korea is an appropriate forum).

9 Nexon characterizes the adequacy of the Korean courts as a “mirage,” arguing that Korea 10 is not an adequate forum in this case because Korean courts are powerless to compel the 11 production of certain evidence. Dkt. No. 38 at 24–25. Nexon claims that they are in a 12 “Kafkaesque” procedural position in the Suwon litigation and cites Irish National Insurance Co.
13 v. Aer Lingus Teoranta, where the Second Circuit reversed a finding of forum non conveniens 14 because of a plaintiff’s inability to attain its desired remedy in a foreign court. 739 F.2d 90, 92 15 (2d Cir. 1984). However, this case is distinguishable because Nexon’s issue relates to a 16 procedural impediment specific to the procedural posture of the Suwan case (Dkt. No. 38 17 at 24–25),² while Irish National relates to the availability of adequate relief on the merits.
18 739 F.2d at 91 (Irish law limited recovery to U.S. $260, and invocation of the doctrine of forum 19 non conveniens “will send the case to a jurisdiction which has imposed such severe monetary 20

21 ² The Court is also suspicious of Nexon’s true motives in filing this action in the United States in the first place, 22 since it chooses to include a forum selection clause in its employment agreements limiting actions to the Korean 23 courts. The Court is not interested in using its limited judicial resources to allow Nexon to exploit the U.S. district 24 courts’ more permissive discovery rules in order to circumvent Korean procedural rules in the parallel litigation. See Dkt. No. 51 at 5. See also Ayco Farms, Inc. v. Ochoa, 862 F.3d 945, 950 (9th Cir. 2017) (“[T]he more it appears that the plaintiff’s choice of a U.S. forum was motivated by forum-shopping reasons . . . the less deference the plaintiff’s choice of forum commands.” (quoting Vivendi SA v. T-Mobile USA Inc., 586 F.3d 689, 695 (2009))); accord Iragorri v. United Techs. Corp., 274 F.3d 65, 72 (2d Cir. 2001) (en banc).

1 limitations on recovery as to eliminate the likelihood that the case will be tried”); cf. Lockman 2 Found. v. Evangelical All. Mission, 930 F.2d 764, 768 (1991) (rejecting plaintiff’s argument that 3 Japanese courts were inadequate because Japan’s procedural rules regarding pretrial discovery 4 are “not identical to those in the United States”). Nexon has not cited any on-point caselaw that 5 indicates the procedural limitations they complain of render the Korean forum inadequate.
6 Defendants have more than satisfied their low bar of establishing the adequacy of the Korean 7 courts.

8 2. The balance of interests weigh in favor of dismissal.

9 Upon balancing the relevant interest factors, it becomes apparent that dismissal in favor 10 of action in the Korean courts is appropriate.

11 a. The public interest factors weigh in favor of dismissal.

12 Here, the Court need only balance the public interest factors, including: (1) local interest 13 in the lawsuit; (2) the court’s familiarity with governing law; (3) the burden on local courts and 14 juries; (4) congestion in the courts; and (5) the costs of resolving a dispute unrelated to this 15 forum. See Lueck, 236 F.3d at 1147; Gulf Oil Corp., 330 U.S. at 509; see also Atl. Marine 16 Constr. Co., 571 U.S. at 53. The Court finds that the public interest factors weigh against 17 maintaining this action in this District.

18 Citizens within the Western District of Washington may have a small interest in this 19 matter given that Ironmace is alleged to have targeted the United States (Dkt. No. 38 at 12), but 20 this interest does not compare to the public resources that would be spent maintaining the action 21 here. Nexon cites Lang Van, Inc. v. VNG Corp., where the Ninth Circuit stated that “copyright 22 cases concerning alleged unlawful activities purposefully directed towards the United States are 23 more amenable to suit in the United States.” 40 F.4th 1034, 1043 (9th. Cir. 2022). But there are 24 clear distinguishing elements present. First, the Ninth Circuit was primarily concerned with 1 personal jurisdiction in that case, not venue. Id. Also, the alternate forum lacked the legal 2 infrastructure necessary to give copyright owners relief. Id. And finally, that case never analyzed 3 the public interest factors as applied to its set of facts. Id.

4 Instead, the reasoning in Creative Technology, Ltd. v. Aztech System Pte., Ltd., is more on 5 point. 61 F.3d 696 (9th Cir. 1995). In that case, the Ninth Circuit held that copyright laws served 6 the interests of the property owners rather than consumers. Creative Tech., 61 F.3d at 704. Here, 7 Nexon raises claims to vindicate its own rights as copyright owner. See Dkt. No. 1 ¶¶ 183–202.
8 None of Nexon’s claims arise under any federal or state consumer protection laws; in fact, the 9 terms consumer and customer are used only four times in the entire 53-page, 202-paragraph 10 Complaint. See id. at 1–53. As previously noted, Korean courts provide an adequate forum for 11 Nexon to vindicate its intellectual property rights. Supra, § III.B.1; see also Primacy Eng’g, Inc., 12 2019 WL 3412914, at *3. On balance, it does not follow that the alleged infringement would 13 give rise to a greater local interest in the resolution of this matter than if the matter is resolved in 14 Korea.

15 Similarly, the respective courts’ familiarity with the governing law weighs neither for nor 16 against dismissal. The Complaint arises under American statutes (Dkt. No. 1), but the current 17 parallel action in Korea is based on Korean copyright and trade secret law. Dkt. No. 38 at 13.
18 Nexon claims that it would be forced to seek relief under the American statutes in a separate 19 parallel action in Seoul if this motion is granted (Dkt. No. 38 at 31–32), but it does not 20 adequately explain this reasoning. On the contrary, Nexon has demonstrated a clear preference 21 for having its rights vindicated in the Korean courts as evidenced by the forum selection clause it 22 requires employees to accept in its employment agreements. See, e.g., Dkt. No. 31 at 208, 211.
23 Additionally, Nexon seeks essentially the same relief in the Suwon action as it does here except 24 under Korean copyright laws (Dkt. No. 38 at 13), and there is no indication that the Suwon court

1 is unable to provide adequate relief on the merits of Nexon’s claims. See supra, § III.B.1. Thus, 2 there is an adequate alternate forum available where Nexon can seek relief without the court
3 having to interpret unfamiliar laws, rendering this factor neutral. See Primacy Eng’g, Inc., 2019 4 WL 3412914, at *4.

5 Court congestion is another neutral factor, as there is nothing in the record that indicates 6 prohibitive congestion in the Korean courts. See Gund v. Philbrook’s Boatyard, 374 F. Supp. 2d 7 909, 914 (W.D. Wash. 2005) (finding that a lack of evidence concerning the foreign court’s 8 docket availability resulted in this factor being deemed neutral). With none of the factors 9 weighing in favor of maintaining the action here, this appears to be the typical case involving a 10 forum-selection clause, wherein “public-interest factors [alone] . . . rarely defeat” a forum non 11 conveniens motion. Atl. Marine Constr. Co., 571 U.S. at 64.

12 b. The private interest factors weigh towards dismissal.

13 Although the Atlantic Marine analytical framework renders the private interest factors 14 null, it is still worth noting that these factors also weigh towards dismissal. All Parties are either 15 Korean corporations or individuals located in Korea. Dkt. No. 1 at 4. The two individual 16 Defendants are Korean residents, and Nexon does not dispute that they worked at Nexon’s 17 offices in Korea while employed by the company. Dkt. No. 29 at 18. Nexon even agrees that 18 Choi allegedly exported the source code from its server in Korea to his own private server, which 19 was also in Korea. Dkt. No. 1 at 13. And although some witnesses may be domestic (Dkt. No. 38 20 at 28), most of the witnesses and evidence are located in Korea or written in Korean. Dkt. No. 29 21 at 19. This being the case, if any of this evidence is to be used in a proceeding in this District, it 22 would need to be transported and/or translated. These facts suggest that it would be more 23 convenient for all Parties to litigate this matter in Korea.

24 The Court therefore GRANTS Defendants’ motion to dismiss for forum non conveniens.

1 C. Continuance and Stay

2 Accordingly, the Court DENIES as moot Defendants’ request to vacate the initial case 3 management schedule and stay discovery because this case is DISMISSED.

4 IV. CONCLUSION

5 For the above reasons, Defendants have carried their burden of showing that an adequate 6 forum exists in the Korean courts and the relevant public (and private) interest factors weigh in 7 favor of dismissal. Therefore, it is hereby ORDERED:

- 8 (1) The Court GRANTS Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss on Grounds of Forum Non 9 Conveniens (Dkt. No. 29);
- 10 (2) The Court DISMISSES without prejudice³ Plaintiff Nexon Korea Corporation’s 11 Complaint;
- 12 (3) The Court DENIES Defendants’ Motion for Relief from the Initial Disclosures 13 Deadline (Dkt. No. 44) as moot; and
- 14 (4) The Clerk SHALL enter judgment consistent with this order.

23 ³ Nexon asks the Court to deny “Defendants’ request for dismissal with prejudice” because it believes it will be 24 required to reassert its claims under U.S. copyright law in Seoul District Court (Dkt. No. 38 at 33, n.8), despite the fact that it has already asserted essentially the same claims under Korean copyright law in the Suwon action (id. at 13). Nevertheless, the Court finds it appropriate to dismiss this action without prejudice.
